FORWARD

Having an archaeological conference at Avery Island was a long-term dream of mine; especially one that could bring together the elders of the LMS (Phillips and Griffin) with some of the younger researchers from up and down the whole Valley. That dream was realized last year, and this bibliography is one of the tangible results. The intangibles are the memories of a group of congenial scholars meeting under ideal circumstances and having nothing to do for three days but talk shop from morning till well into the night, interspersed with certain Falstaffian jolity. Such memories as those, etched into our minds on a background of balmy skies and sunsets over Vermilion Bay have considerable longevity. On the other hand, this bibliography has its own short half-life; as a specialized research tool it can prosper only by change (addition and correction) and will be a different thing to each of its users. We hope that this flexible format (cards and a separate Index) will allow for these changes and enhance its value as each owner sorts, selects, and adds as he sees fit. Additional issues of cards and new indexes are contemplated should interest prove its value.

We are grateful to those Avery Island residents that made the LMS Conference there possible and also so pleasant. We thank the Zemurray Foundation for support to make this publication a reality.

INTRODUCTION

This bibliography was prepared for the Conference on Lower Mississippi Valley Archaeology held at Avery Island, May 11-14, 1978. The conference was sponsored by the Lower Mississippi Survey and convened by Stephen Williams. It was hosted by Walter S. McIlhenny and Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Simmons.

The emphasis of this bibliography is upon archaeological and historical source material for the Lower Mississippi Valley, broadly considered substantively and geographically. Pertinent references to the natural environment have been included, with special attention to paleoecology, historical geology, and descriptive geography. Generally omitted are studies of modern climate, flora/fauna, soil surveys, and technical studies, such as MRC (flood control, levee construction) and oil company (prospecting, subsurface structural geology) reports. Also not included are radio-carbon dates (the subject of another document for the conference), general theoretical studies, or obituaries, although the bibliographies of the latter have been incorporated.

Other sources that contributed to this compilation were the various bibliographies of the LMS, the Tozzer Library author and subject catalogue files, the bibliographies of major archaeological reports, and the contributions of individual participants in the conference. Existing state archaeological bibliographies (e.g., Davis and Scholtz, Thorne and Lewis, Newman and Simmons) were also drawn upon. Thus, while the following listing cannot be complete, it is reasonably comprehensive.

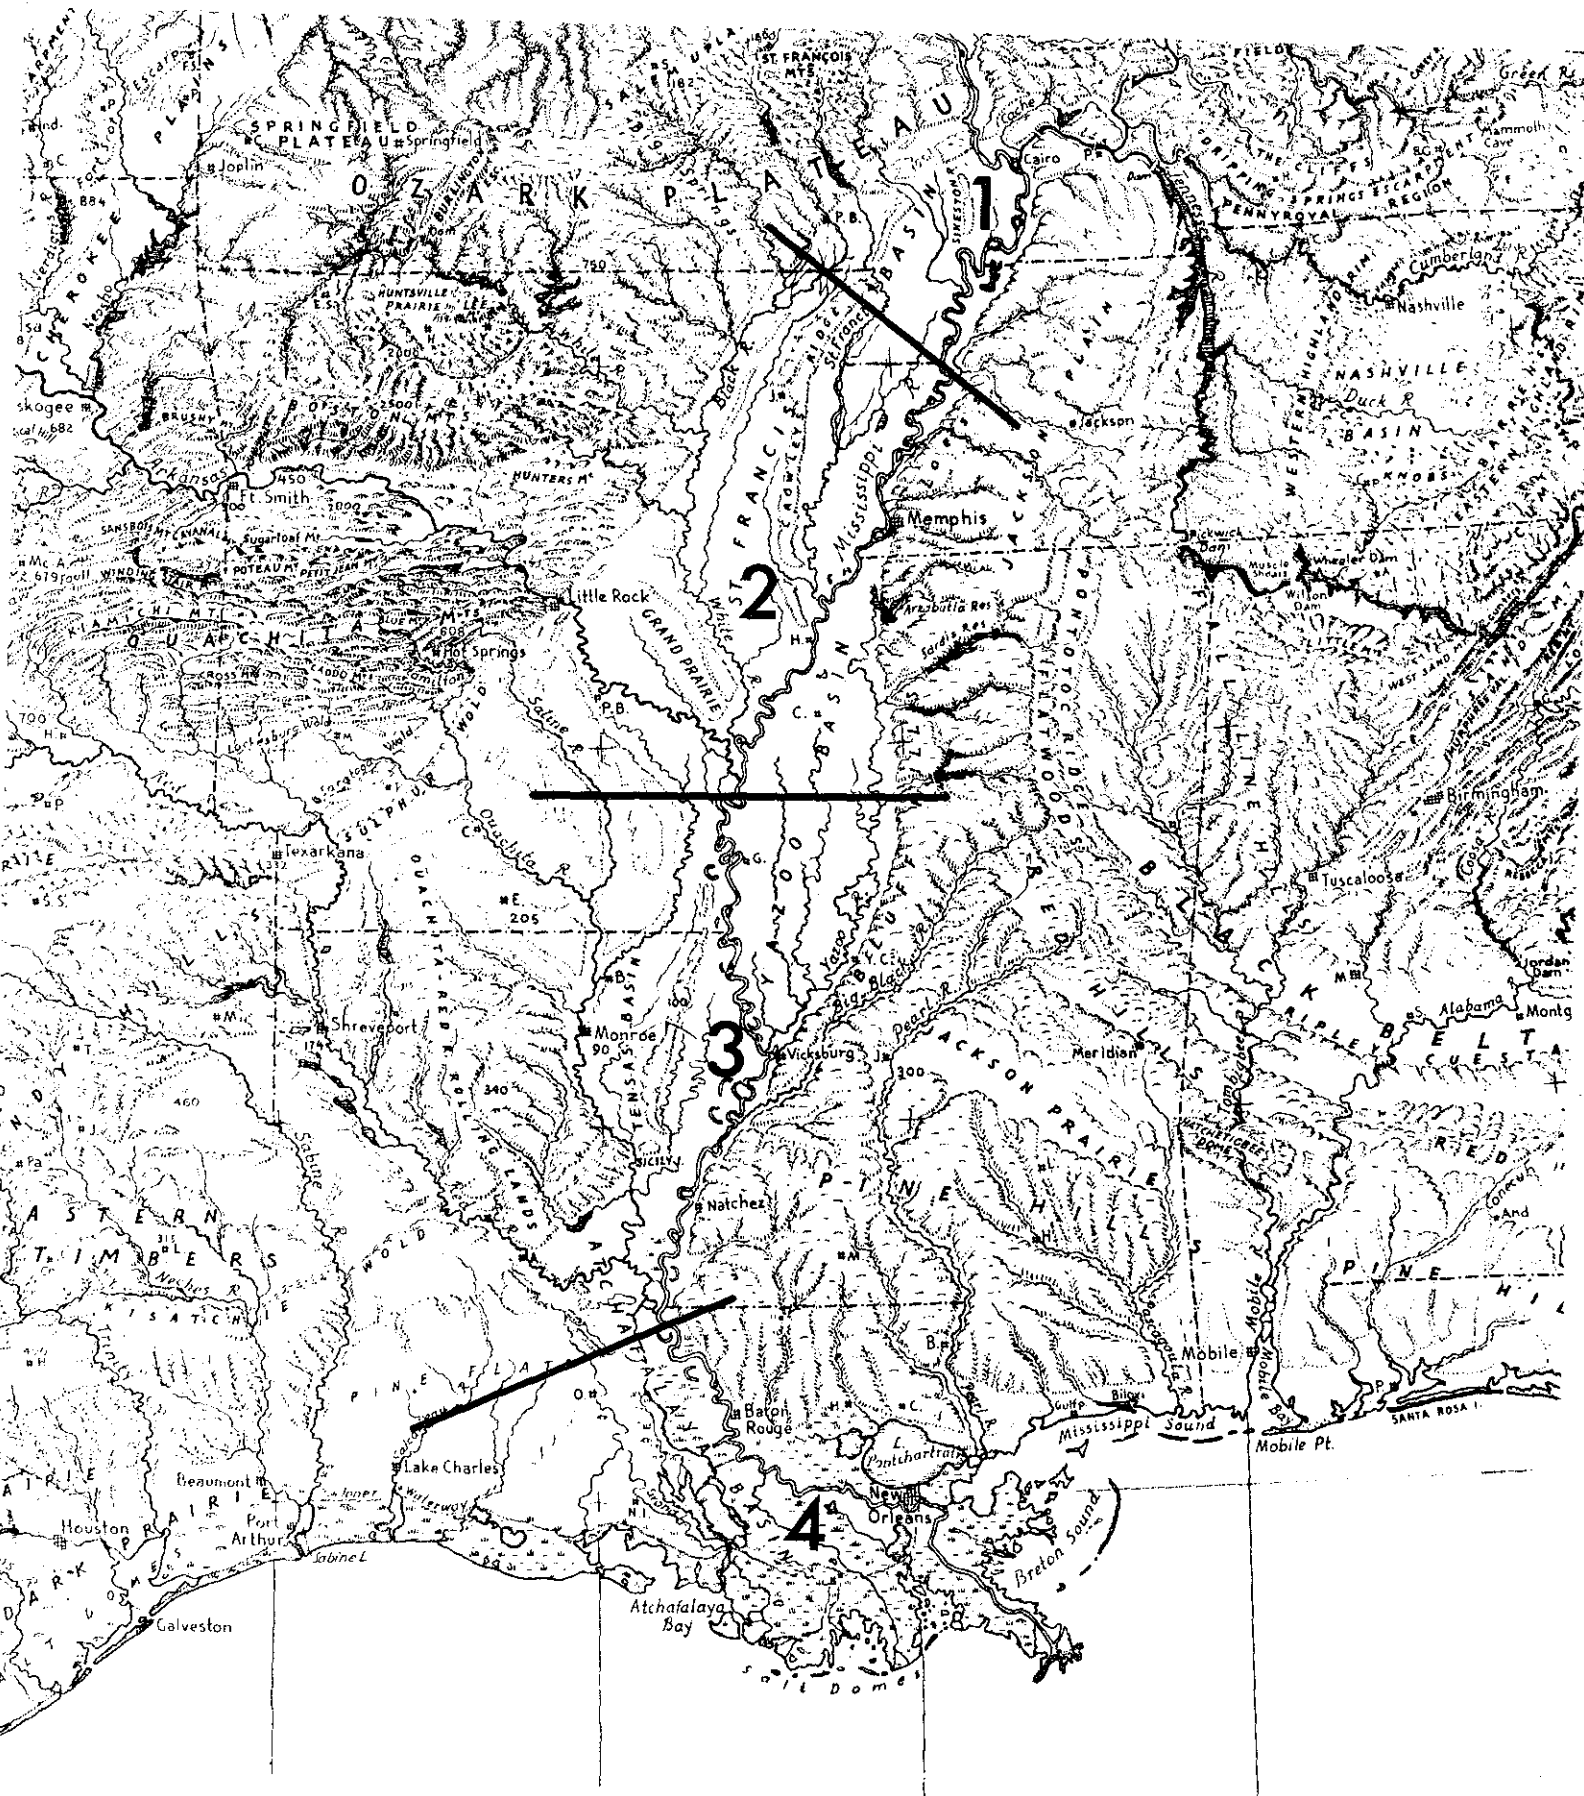

Presentation is in two parts: I, individual 3x5 file cards arranged alphabetically and annotated as necessary; II, an index of authors classified in general topical categories, subdivided regionally.
